

Northern Editions

An iconic Northern Territory art institution, Northern Editions is well known locally and nationally for the limited edition fine art prints it produces and has played a central role in printmaking in northern Australia since 1993.

Northern Editions' printmakers offer creative and inspiring workshop opportunities to both Indigenous and non-Indigenous artists in remote and regional Australian communities as well as at the Darwin studio at the Casuarina Campus at Charles Darwin University.

Each artist is supported by a well-established team of printmakers from the conception of the matrix in a workshop through to the final stages of editioning in the Northern Editions printmaking studio.

Now recognised as a Cultural Enterprise of the University, Northern Editions' operation of a workshop and gallery engages artists, printmakers and the wider art-loving public to promote a greater appreciation and understanding of the diversity of the print medium.

Together, printmakers and artists have collaborated to create prints that celebrate the strength, beauty and diversity of printmaking in northern Australia.
